

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A recoil pad, particularly for firearms, which can be fixed detachably to the stock of the firearm and includes a plastic base and a rear member made of deformable material, preferably polyurethane gel, which is rigidly coupled to the base and is adapted to 5 dissipate the energy transferred to the shoulder by the recoil of the firearm upon firing. The recoil pad has two pins for snap fixing the pad to the stock of the rifle.